Preliminaries to Human Communication

Human communication consists of the sending and receiving of verbal and nonverbal messages between two or more people. This seemingly simple (but in reality quite complex) process is the subject of this book, to which this chapter provides a foundation. Here we begin the study of human communication by ...

The Essentials of Human Communication

Human communication is a distributed process that depends on a circuit of brain regions, especially frontal and temporal cortical regions. Broca area, located in the ventral frontal lobe on the inferior frontal gyrus (IFG), is considered essential in the motor control of speech. ... (Fourth Edition), 2019. Language.
